Facts about Nefertiti - glue inside flip book.

Nefertiti was the Great Royal Wife of the Egyptian Pharaoh Akhenaten.

Nefertiti and her husband were known for changing Egypt's religion from a polytheistic religion to a monotheistic religion.

She was made famous by a limestone bust of her, now in Berlin's Neues Museum. The bust is one of the most copied works of ancient Egypt. It was attributed to the sculptor Thutmose, and it was found in his workshop.

QUEEN FROM
51 B.C. - 30 B.C.

Cleopatra VII was the last ruler to rule Egypt and is the most famous of all Egyptian Queens. After she died Egypt became a Roman province. She formed a liaison with Gaius Julius Caesar that solidified her grip on the throne that she shared with her brother. She later elevated her son with Caesar, Caesarion, to co-ruler. After Caesar's assassination in 44 BC, she aligned with Mark Antony in opposition to Caesar's legal heir Gaius Julius Caesar Octavian (later known as Augustus). After losing the Battle of Actium to Octavian's forces, Antony committed suicide. Cleopatra soon followed suit, according to tradition killing herself by means of an asp bite on August 12, 30 BC.

QUEEN FROM

Hatshepsut meaning Foremost of Noble Ladies was the fifth pharaoh of the eighteenth dynasty of Ancient Egypt. She is generally regarded by Egyptologists as one of the most successful pharaohs, reigning longer than any other woman of an indigenous Egyptian dynasty. In comparison with other female pharaohs, Hatshepsut's reign was long and prosperous. She was successful in warfare early in her reign, but generally is considered to be a pharaoh who inaugurated a long peaceful era. Nobody knows for sure how she died. After her reign, her name and image were removed from every monument.
