

U.S. Government

Exploring each branch of the

Before you print off all of this document, decide if you want to print off page 2 or 3 or both of them.

Page 2, the child fills the information in.

Page 3, provides the information.

You may want both pages to mix and match with the different ages of your children or your needs. For example, you may prefer they do a lot of writing in this lapbook or you may wish to do it with less time and less writing. You decide.

Legislative Branch

This is the back. As with all of my books shaped like this one, the cover is always made just a tad longer so it covers.

Fold in right and left sides, bottom up and cover down.

Executive Branch

Judicial Branch

Write in your own information or use some of this information below. Glue these pages to the inside of the book after you describe each branch.

The information below is from: Ben's Guide to U.S. Government.

Click this to read about the executive branch.

The executive branch of Government makes sure that the laws of the United States are obeyed. The President of the United States is the head of the executive branch of government. This branch is very large so the President gets help from the Vice President, department heads (Cabinet members), and heads of independent agencies.

Click here to read about the legislative branch.

The legislative branch of government is made up of the Congress and government agencies, such as the Government Printing Office and Library of Congress, that provide assistance to and support services for the Congress. Article I of the Constitution established this branch and gave Congress the power to make laws. Congress has two parts, the House of Representatives and the Senate.

Click here to read about the judicial branch.

The judicial branch of government is made up of the court system. The Supreme Court is the highest court in the land. Article III of the Constitution established this Court and all other Federal courts were created by Congress. Courts decide arguments about the meaning of laws, how they are applied, and whether they break the rules of the Constitution.

The executive branch of Government makes sure that the laws of the United States are obeyed. The President of the United States is the head of the executive branch of government. This branch is very large so the President gets help from the Vice President, department heads (Cabinet members), and heads of independent agencies.

The legislative branch of government is made up of the Congress and government agencies, such as the Government Printing Office and Library of Congress, that provide assistance to and support services for the Congress. Article I of the Constitution established this branch and gave Congress the power to make laws. Congress has two parts, the House of Representatives and the Senate.

The judicial branch of government is made up of the court system. The Supreme Court is the highest court in the land. Article III of the Constitution established this Court and all other Federal courts were created by Congress. Courts decide arguments about the meaning of laws, how they are applied, and whether they break the rules of the Constitution.

Write in your own information or use some of this information below. Glue these pages to the inside of the book after you describe each branch.

The information below is from: Ben's Guide to U.S. Government.

Click this to read about the executive branch.

The executive branch of Government makes sure that the laws of the United States are obeyed. The President of the United States is the head of the executive branch of government. This branch is very large so the President gets help from the Vice President, department heads (Cabinet members), and heads of independent agencies.

Click here to read about the legislative branch.

The legislative branch of government is made up of the Congress and government agencies, such as the Government Printing Office and Library of Congress, that provide assistance to and support services for the Congress. Article I of the Constitution established this branch and gave Congress the power to make laws. Congress has two parts, the House of Representatives and the Senate.

Click here to read about the judicial branch.

The judicial branch of government is made up of the court system. The Supreme Court is the highest court in the land. Article III of the Constitution established this Court and all other Federal courts were created by Congress. Courts decide arguments about the meaning of laws, how they are applied, and whether they break the rules of the Constitution.