

GREECE

by Robert Frost

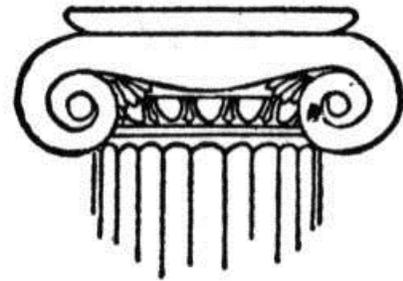

They say, "Let there be no more war!"

And straightway, at the word,

Along the Mediterranean shore,

The call to arms is heard.

Greece could not let her glory fade!

Although peace be in sight,

The race the Persian wars arrayed

Must fight one more good fight.

Greece! Rise triumphant. Long ago

It was you proved to men

A few may countless hosts o'erthrow:

Now prove it once again!
